WANKER WEINSTEIN: THE GROTESQUE FACE OF SEXUAL ASSAULT

By Gonçalo Alves

Last week we heard the news that this man, Harvey Weinstein, has been harassing, assaulting and raping multiple women he has worked with for decades. In case you're not familiar with his work, Weinstein has produced iconic movies such as Pulp Fiction, Shakespeare in Love, The Crying - wait. Why does any of this matter?

You don't need to know what great movies he's produced or what projects he's helped fund. This man has been accused by over 50 people of sexual misconduct. Over 50 people. It doesn't matter if he cured cancer- he has still harassed, assaulted and/or raped over 50 different women. His accomplishments have no place when we're discussing the disgusting things he's done. It's frustrating to see multiple men nowadays getting a green card for gross behaviour just because they're hot, talented, or rich. It shouldn't work like that. But what else can you expect from a world where Donald "grab'em by the pussy" Trump is President of the United States?

Multiple people have used the hashtag #MeToo as a platform to share what sort of harassment they've been suffering for years. Not only is it a brave move, but it also showcases that in literally every single industry you can think of, where there is power, there is abuse of it. And that abuse often takes form in attacks of a sexual nature. No one is safe from people in power. If you're not rich or powerful, you're a possible victim. And Harvey Weinstein is a man with power.

Just to list off some of the women he has abused, we're talking Asia Argento -who starred the in the first xXx action movie, Gwyneth Paltrow - from Shakespeare in Love, and many many MANY others. He has tried to justify his acts saying he's attempting to improve himself, become a better man for his family. Great that you realise what you did was wrong, but in this world you have to pay for the crimes you commit. It doesn't matter if you murdered someone 10 years ago and now feel super guilty and want to improve yourself - you still committed a crime. I can't help but wonder if these people saying he's trying to be better know that what he did was not only illegal, but also created fear and trauma in dozens of women. He should atone for it.

HUNTING PEOPLE: WAKE UP, BEING GAY IS STILL ILLEGAL

By Elena Perelló Sender

Being gay is still illegal in 72 countries and in 8 there is the death penalty. Since Al Sisi came to power in Egypt the harassment against the LGBTQ+ community has drastically increased and the government has banned the dissemination of a "shameful disease".

"The recent campaigns that talk about the presence of lesbians, gays, bisexuals and transsexuals as human rights are not real. Homosexuality is against humanity and religions."

-The Egyptian Government

It all started the past 22nd of September when during the concert of the Lebanese band Mashrou' Leila some pride flags were shown. 15 people were arrested for encouraging debauchery and being part of an illegal organisation, even though homosexuality is not expressly banned in Egyptian law. Bollocks! Guess what? That "illegal organisation" is not real, they are just people at a concert being openly proud of who they are.

The number of people under arrest has risen to 57, most of them hunted (yes, hunted, like animals) through dating apps, a normal procedure for the Egyptian cops.

Just in case you are not stunned by this situation, here comes the worst part: for those who were men, the majority of them had to pass anal examinations. The estimated number of people under arrest during the Al Sisi administration is more than 250 in his campaign of "public morality".

Human Rights Watch and International Amnesty have already said something about this situation but it is not enough. Where are the journalists and the news reporters when they are needed?

Yes, this is real, they are killing us, they are arresting us. We still need to fight for our rights and for our life. This is why we still need Pride, we need to raise our voices for those who don't have one anymore.

TRUMP OR NOT?

"I can be a killer and a nice guy."

DID HE SAY THIS?

NEXT ISSUE OUT NOVEMBER 6TH

LAST ISSUE: YES, HE DID SAY THAT

States to get rid of these sanctions. In exchange, Iran had to restrict the amount of radioactive materials it possessed, making it fucking difficult to create nuclear weapons.

Then, dickhead Trump comes along and decides that the 'spirit of the deal' was being dishonoured.

DOES ANYONE FUCKING UNDERSTAND THIS WHOLE TRUMP/IRAN DEAL?

By Katie Bowdery

DEFINITION OF THE WEEK

COMMUNIST

A person who believes that everything should be owned by the community, where each person contributes and is then given what they need.

Right. So, back in 1979 the US imposed 'economic sanctions' on Iran to restrict the creation of weapons and shit like that. Meaning that Iran's economy was in a really shitty place for decades (making it really difficult for those who lived there). But, back in 2015 when Obama was in charge, a deal was made between Russia, Germany, France, China, the United Kingdom, and the United
